Apollo & Daphne

Apollo was the Roman sun god in the myth. He killed a giant snake . He was proud.

“ What do you do, little boy?” Apollo asked Cupid. “ You might hurt yourself ? Why don't you go away and leave your weapons to someone like me ? I know how to use them?”

Cupid was angry after Apollo's words. He took two different arrows. One had a gold and sharp tip. The person hit by this arrow would fall in love. The other was not sharp. It had a lead tip. The person hit by it could not love.

Cupid shot the golden arrow into Apollo's heart, and the lead arrow hit the beautiful Daphne. Daphne is the daughter of the river god, Peneus. From then on, Apollo was crazy in love with Daphne.

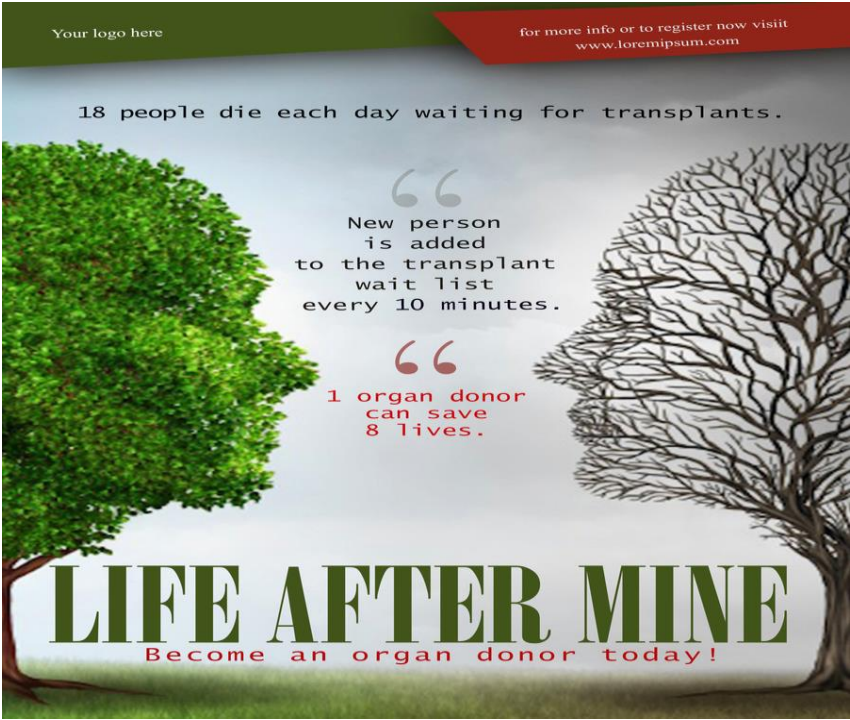

Because of Cupid's arrow, Daphne didn't like the love. Apollo ran after Daphne. She ran and was tired. She asked her father, Peneus, to help her change her form.

She became a laurel tree. Apollo stood before her, and kissed her leaves. “ You cannot be my wife, so you must always be my tree. I wear you for my crown on my head and your leaves are the wreaths for the victory of Romans.” To this day, the laurel wreath becomes a symbol of victory.

From : Organ Donation Ethics – EmmaJ

Poster 3

Michael Fetzer told his mother that he would like to be an organ donor if he died. Two weeks later, while walking home from a friend’s house, a car hit Michael and killed him on the last day of school in 2011.

Knowing his wishes, his parents donate his organs . His parents made his dream come true.

His heart went to a 12-year-old girl, Mia Brickey, in Salt Lake City. Her heart was bad . Mia Brickey is 19 years old now.

The gifts of life that could inspire others to do the same, Bobbi Fetzer said.

“We remember them every day and want other people to remember them, too,” she said, tears from her eyes.

“It’s hard,” Michael Fetzer’s mother said. “But I know he’s still living on through Mia. Part of him . To me , that’s awesome. He gets to grow up and see these things through her eyes.”
