Clerk: Welcome! Let me show you our new robot. This one is called Robert the Robot.

Boy: Mommy, I want a puppy, not a robot. Why are we here?

Mommy: Bodie! Why don't we look at the robot first, And then we'll decide what to buy.

Boy: Oh, OK!

Clerk: Besides a beating heart, Robert the Robot has many sensors that will respond to any move and noise.

Mommy: How is that?

Clerk: If you hug him, he will know. All his limbs start to move, his eyes look softer, his heart beats slower, and he will hold you back.

Boy: Really? That is cool!

Clerk: If you hit him, or you shout at him, he will hold both his hands close, open his eyes, and his heart will beat fast.

Mommy: Wow! It's like a kid, and it has feelings.

Clerk: Yes, he does. He's like our best friend. He's about the size of a small child. He's half robot, and half boy. So, some children come here to scare him; other children take care of him just like a doll or a baby.

Boy: I'll take care of him like my baby brother.

When it arrives,
Everyone cheers.
The shirts and shorts dance
On the clothesline,
The trees and flowers wave
Like they're saying hi,
And the clouds are so excited
To have a running race.

When it comes,
Dad's face falls.
His coat and jeans jump
Off the clothesline
Into the pond.
The tree leaves hop off
And have a party on his new car.

When it gets here,
A lot of fun things I notice:
The pond's face,
Sad and old with lines;
Mrs. Smith's bread,
Delicious and freshly baked.
But what smell is it?
Oh, no, it's from Mr. Brown's feet!
