It was supposed to be a usual flight from New York to Los Angeles. Flight 828 took off on a cloudy Thursday morning, carrying 145 passengers. Everything appears usual — until the plane flew into a strange rainstorm.

The sky became dark suddenly, the rain was heavy, and the wind blew crazily. The plane began to shake strongly. Passengers tried to hold onto their seats in fear. Then, without warning, the plane dropped suddenly, making the people cry out. The pilot tried hard to keep the plane steady as the rainstorm grew worse.

For ten terrible minutes, the rainstorm got bigger. Then, just as quickly as it appeared, the skies cleared. The passengers finally felt happy because something worrying was no longer happening. But something wasn't right. The pilot then got a strange message from the control tower: "Flight 828, you missed for five years."

The plane landed safely — but the world changed. Everything moved on, but the passengers had no memory of time passing. Scientists and the public were all surprised to find out what happened. Some believed it was a strange accident. Others thought it was something supernatural.

Whatever it was, one thing was clear: life for the passengers of Flight 828 would never be the same again.

They both have hard shells to protect their bodies, but they live in different places and have different features and diets. Turtles mostly live in water. Some turtles live in the ocean, while others live in rivers or lakes. They spend most of their time swimming and only come on land to rest, sunbathe, or lay eggs. Tortoises live on land. They like dry places like deserts or grassy areas. Tortoises do not swim and do not like water. Turtles have flat, light shells and webbed feet. They can help them swim faster. Tortoises have round, heavy shells. Their legs are thick and strong, like elephant legs. They can help them walk on land. Turtles eat plants, insects, small fish, and more. Tortoises mostly eat grass, leaves, and fruit.
